Oil Stocks and the "Blue Sky" Law

The last regular session of the legislature passed a so called "blue sky" law, intended to protect investors in stock company enterprises against the frauds frequently practiced, especially by self-styled oil and mining concerns. The law requires a full statement from the corporation, to be filed with the state corporation commission, showing the plan of organization, the property held and other essential facts before permission is given to offer the stock for sale in Virginia.

Apparently, the law does not prohibit the advertisement of such enterprises as have not complied with this requirement and places no restriction upon the publishers of newspapers to whom advertisements are offered, often accompanied by certified checks.

The law, however, is entitled to respect and observance in its spirit. Accordingly, The Virginian has adopted the policy of declining to print the advertisements of stock promoters until such concerns have fully complied with the law and have obtained the approval of their plans by the state corporation commission. Advertising copy and checks are returned to the senders where it is found they have not met the requirements of the Virginia statute.—Richmond Virginian

It has always been the policy of the TIMES VIRGINIAN to decline such advertising, but much stock of questionable value has been sold in this county in recent years to our people. Before buying, a letter to the Corporation Commission will advise you of the probable value of the stock.

Patience and gentleness are not virtues when one is troubled with and buffeted without by the rld's trials and demands. There are ny times when the taking of a city ight soon lies to the individual sol ho mastered than the conquest of his own violent and tongue. There are ose days when a carping or unjust ord falls on the spirit like a lighted atch on tinder; wherefore we should all the more careful to atone no tinder for carnivirus, and toss no lighted atches at our fellows.

TO ENCOURAGE THRIFT

Schools Called Upon by Treasury Department to Make Saving Happy Habit.

Through the government savings directors of the twelve federal reserve districts, the Savings Division of the United States Treasury Department has called upon the normal schools, colleges and universities of the country to aid in the government campaign to make thrift a happy habit. The American Council on Education, representing institutions of higher learning throughout the country, has joined with the Savings Division to secure the co-operation of the schools.

The plan evolved by the Savings Division and the Council on Education contemplates the creation of thrift organizations in each the normal schools, colleges and universities, to teach the basic principles of intelligent saving—wise buying, sane spending, safe investment and avoidance of waste, and to aid in fostering the advantage of Thrift Stamps and War Savings Stamps as the ideal investment for small savings. Through the American Council on Education, the presidents of the institutions of higher learning have been urged to name institutional thrift representatives who will co-operate with the local savings organizations. This has been done in most cases. The educational institutions are expected to have a large influence in the movement to make the United States a nation of intelligent savers.

WORLD'S HISTORY IN RE SUMM PROVES W. S. S. WILL PAY.

One thing we know as we peruse the history of antiquity, from times when Noah was the news, of Babylon's iniquity, down through the days when Caesar's ghost was haunting Brutus in his bed, is this. The spenders shouted most, but nearly all of them were bled. Whereas the lad who never flung nosegays to the Forum crowd was never immaturely hung nor massacred for an early shroud. This bit of ancient apothegm has now its modern counterpart, and more and more it's borne on me how splendid is the saving art—the art of mind ing one's dollars and watching little things increase. It rides the future at its career, shouts result on our other grease. Today when W. S. S. you read upon a hanging sign, you know the man is Thriftiness. A virtue once quite hard to find. I do not think the war for much, but this I've learned, and learned it proper, when some one tries to make a "touch" a Thrift Stamp makes an A-1 stopper.

Watch your nickels and the dollars will take care of themselves.

Beautifying the Ugly Country Village

The general ugliness of most small towns and villages is to be deplored. They are neither an inspiration nor a pleasure to country people. The stores are surrounded with a layer of banana peel and the station sits in a desolate waste.

Country women cannot plant flowers and grass in the village streets, but they could certainly co-operate in changing their shopping center from a dirty, insignificant little back station to a lovely blooming spot at which strangers would ex claim and of which residents would be proud

Men rarely start a movement to beautify anything, but when women get together and improve things the men usually show their appreciation by ceasing to ridicule and offering to do the heavy work.

The pity is that town women, who are supposed to see and travel more, do not bestir themselves and set an ex mple to country women as well as to neighboring towns. A bigger and more compulsory reason would seem to be the need for mothers to have their children grow up with beautiful surroundings in the hope that they might absorb into their souls a little of their lovely refinement.—Mrs. H, in Progressive Farmer.
